Defining Safe Working at Height: Responsibility + Control = Competency

IRATA has trained in excess of 30000 rope access workers and has member companies in every continent so it can offer broad experience of working safely in all conditions from the tough environment of the offshore oil rigs to the iconic structures of the world (including Big Ben, the Sydney Opera House and the tallest building in the world, the Burj Kalifa in Dubai.

IRATA's members worked in excess of five million hours on ropes last year and, for the 21st year, recorded safe working statistics that are the envy of others in this sector.

Come and hear how men working on ropes are solving work at height and difficult access issues every day of every year in the UK and around the world in such countries as China, Iran, Lithuania, Chile and Thailand as well as all the established commercial areas.

Britain has a world leader that delivers safe working in testing conditions and is admired wherever it trains and operates. Let's get that good news out!
